'EASY' Recycling Program raises $225,000 for Education STAPLES Business Depot donates over $1,000 to 216 elementary and high schools across Canada

Toronto, ON - October 18, 2005 - STAPLES Business Depot today, announced that it will be donating $225,000 to elementary and high schools that participated in their 'Recycling for Education' Program over the last 12 months.

"Staples Business Depot collected 225,000 eligible toner cartridges and is pleased to donate $1.00 for each one to local elementary and high schools in communities across Canada" says Steve Matyas, President of STAPLES Business Depot in Canada. "The STAPLES Recycle for Education" program is an easy way for educators, parents, students and our customers to help schools and the environment. This program has been so successful that we are proud to repeat it for the 2005/06 school year."

According to recent statistics one school can use 300 inkjet cartridges a year and each student uses a minimum of 6 to 10 cartridges a year.

"Inkjet printers can be found in nearly every home in Canada," states Mr. Matyas. "Most cartridges – an estimated 375,000,000 - are thrown in the garbage and then dumped in landfill sites where it can take centuries before the plastic containers decompose, so recycling will make a huge impact on the environment."

The program is EASY; cartridges can be dropped into the specially marked recycling bins in any of the 240 STAPLES Business Depot stores across the country.

The money raised will once again be channeled to the elementary and high schools that register online for the program. To be eligible schools are asked to register with the program at www.RecycleForEd.ca before June 1, 2006. The funds raised will be distributed to participating schools in September 2006. STAPLES Business Depot expects to raise $250,000 for participating schools this year.

All elementary and secondary schools in Canada are eligible whether or not there is a STAPLES Business Depot in their community. STAPLES Business Depot is a large supporter of public education and the environment.
